Monday	HOT TASK To write a sequence of sentences to form a narrative	Zoom with me – link on Class Dojo. Today we will write our counting stories, using our new settings and plans from last week. This will be our hot task, because we've finished all our learning for this unit of work. You'll be able to look back at your cold task from the beginning of the unit and see how much you've improved.	This should be as independent as possible. Write your new counting story using your plan and story map from last week. Write each section separately, leaving a line between each. Use the 'Every time we write' checklist to remind you what I expect to see.	Your story plan and story map from last week Every time we write checklist	sentence punctuation vocabulary
Tuesday		See Miss Foster's Tuesday plan on the home learning page.
Wednesday	To make simple revisions, additions and corrections	Watch my Loom video first – link on Class Dojo Today we will look at how to edit and improve our work, ready to be made into a book.	Using a different colour, edit and improve your story from yesterday. Think about: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - punctuation - spellings - capital letters - improving your vocabulary - checking sentences make sense. 	Coloured pen or pencil for editing	edit improve correct
Thursday	To use clear, neat handwriting	Zoom with me – link on Class Dojo Today, we are going to turn our counting stories into books that can be shared. We will write each part neatly, on a separate page, just like in the book 'We all went on safari', and each page will be illustrated with the animals from that part of the story and the number of animals. We will focus on our handwriting. Good handwriting has: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - letters the right sizes (tall ascenders and long descenders) - letters that are correctly formed - even spacing between words Use your alphabet mat to help you.	Create your counting story book on sheets of paper, either using the template provided or using your own. Make it look beautiful, like a real book. You could even make a front cover when you are finished.	Optional page template (print one for each part of the story)	handwriting spaces formation ascenders descenders
Friday	To use clear, neat handwriting	Today, we will finish making our counting story books. Zoom with me – link on Class Dojo Bring your book (finished or unfinished) to our zoom to share with the class!	Finish making your picture book from wherever you got to yesterday.
